

Looking for time...

So yeah. I guess I am once again looking for more projects to work on in my spare time, not that I have much of that. I am currently working on cutting my hours down a bit in work because I would like to work more on this website and my Python Projects. I have made some small steps in these projects but I am no where near where I would like to be. Like these small blog posts for start I would like to make these PDF's that I enjoy working on look a lot nicer rather than plain text I would like to add my own touch to them. I am also working on possibly a couple of other things that I would like to start getting into. I have done a few things regarding bootstrap and I will be using that for my future website template or backing code.

New Phone?

In order to get my self focused on these project I will be reaching out to a few of my friends that I went through university with, for some support. I have a new Samsung phone to help me manage these projects I am also looking to switch from IOS to android. The main reason I got the phone was for testing purposes. Websites, Applications and or web apps that I will be working on in the future.