So recently I have been working on moving my achieve of notes, trackers and projects all into this application called Notion that I am new to and am looking forward to trying out. The reason I have done this is because I am usually a loyal user of this application called Simplenote but, as the name suggests, it leaves a lot to be desired. I guess that you can say I have been lured into the project management side of it so I am able to take control of my three different projects that I have currently active. So on that note I will keep you all posted regarding my result.

Progress:

In terms of my website template that I am looking to lay it out a bit more I have a few mind map ideas floating around regarding to layout of the site I should have the over all functionality sorted out in the next month.
